—Edgerton (Reporter)—Several weeks ago this paper noted the appearance of hog cholera among the herds of several farmers on Allerton Prairie and thereabouts. It now transpires that the disease has cost the farmers in that vicinity a good many hundred dollars. As soon as the contagion shows itself the porkers in the neighborhood are rushed off to market in condition to sell. It is told of one farmer who sold a drove of hogs to a Fort Atkinson dealer and for some reason they were held over for two or three days before shipment and ten of them died in the yards of the cholera. The farmer was called upon to make good the loss, which he did.
